Mrs. Silver was a serious-minded person at all times, but there were moments when her neighbor the bish op was frivolous. The bishop had just returned from spending the winter in South Carolina.

Mrs. Silver, after greeting him warmly, asked what feature of life in the South made the greatest impression on him.

"Well," replied the bishop after a moment of deep thought. "I don't know of anything that impressed me more than seeing a lot of cows eating oyster shells."

"Did you observe?" queried Mrs. Silver earnestly, "that this diet made any perceptible difference in the flavor of the milk?" "I should say I did!" responded the bishop. "Why, my dear woman, all the cows in South Carolina give oys ter soup."-The Sunday Magazine.

Sir Wemyss Reid wrote of Abrahan Lincoln: "One must not blame Eng lishmen too severely, however, for their lack of apprectation of Lincoln It is doubtful if even now he is appreclated at his true worth by Americans themselves. Some years ago I had the pleasure of taking in to dinner a charming young lady who was Lincoln's direct descendant. I said to her, 'you can hardly understand how pleased I am to have met you. There is scarcely any man whose name is familiar to me whom I honor as I honor the memory of your grandfather.' The young lady opened her eyes in innocent amaze ment and confessed subsequently that she had been very much surprised at my little speech. 'At home they never say anything about grandpapa."

Evil of Too Many Churches.

America has too many churches Towns which might be well administered spiritually by one clergyman or two have six, eight or ten. No one of the six or more congregations can pay for a good preacher. Few of them can pay all the cost of any preacher, however poor. Nor can any one of them pay for all the time of their spiritual leader. So only very young men are to be had and the de mands upon their time cover so wide a territory that preaching must be almost their exclusive occupation and pastoral duties be almost entirely disregarded. One of the clergymen observes tersely and justly: "No busi-Times.

CARE OF CUT GLASS

HOUSEHOLD TREASURES EASILY SPOILED BY MISUSE.

Slightest Scratch Made While Washing or Wiping Means the End of Usefulness of that Particular Utensil.

In reply to an inquiry how to clean cut glass "The Up-to-Date Waitress" gives the following: Wash the glass, one piece at a time, using a soft brush as needed. Great care must be taken with the pans, towels, cloth and water used in washing and wiping glass. If glass be scratched in any way, even slightly, it is weakened, and is almost sure to break at that point. One grain of sand, such as is often seen in the bottom of a pan in which lettuce or spinach has been washed, has been the occasion for the loss of many a piece of fine glass. Glass that is deeply cut is not easily dried; the moisture remains in the crevices. Bury the glass as soon as dried in a box of fine boxwood or basswood sawdust (sawdust from woods of a resinous nature are best for this purpose). Let the glass stand half an hour or longer, then remove from the box, and brush with a soft cloth or chamois. Spread the sawdust out to dry, then set aside to use again.

Japanese lamp shades grow more beautiful each season. A few years ago it was almost impossible to find artistic shades, except those that were made to order, and they were expensive. The Japanese have solved the problem in inexpensive lamp shades. Many attractive paper designs are shown in the shops. The frames are of wood, lacquered black, and treated in such a way that they are not affected by heat. The paper is tough and of transparent quality. The decorations are by native artists, in simple but rich tones, and are very effective. The Japanese bowls for lamps are the prettiest, but there are some good shapes in American pottery that combine well with Japanese shades. The bowls should be plain, but if a little decoration is desired, it ought to be simple. Occasionally, a tired member of the family, or perhaps one who is ill, may wish breakfast served in his or her room. A dainty individual service makes the fitting out of the tray an easy task. But in case one has not indulged in this luxury, select the daintiest china. Have the linen spotless, and the silver glistening. Let the eggs be cooked just right, the baked potato rolled in a napkin, and the toast well covered. Make the tray attractive by laying the fresh fruit on green leaves, and garnish the broiled fish or chop with parsley or cress. If eggs are to form the breakfast, they should be removed from the shells, or if poached, garnished with a bit of green.

Good Appetizer.

Very large French prunes opened and stuffed with Indian curry and rice are one of the appetizers now in vogue. The rice stuffling is boiled long enough to completely lose its shape and to become a soft, somewhat sticky mass. The curry sauce mixed through it then is made very hot. The insides of the largest available prunes are then removed to afford space for the filling and are taken and boiled down into a thick syrup. The prunes at length are placed on a circular bit of toast, while the syrup is poured over the whole. It is customary to serve this appetizer slightly warm, two prunes being allotted to each dish.

Jam Pudding.

Line a buttered bake dish with a good puff paste. For a batter allow two eggs and their weight in butter and in dried and sifted flour. Cream the butter and sugar, whip in the yolks, beaten smooth, and then the frothed whites, alternately, with the flour, which has been sifted twice with a teaspoonful of baking powder.

Now spread the puff paste in the bake dish with peach jam, or with preserved peaches, mixed with a tablespoonful of preserved ginger, cut fine. Pour the batter upon this prepared bed and bake in a steady oven. Cover with paper as you would cake, removing to brown after the pudding has puffed up well.

It is really very nice when properly made, although un-American in con-

Before Luncheon Titbit. Before luncheon small bits of dried herring are frequently passed about as appetizers. When this is done each guest helps himself to two or three pleces, places them on his bread and butter plates and nibbles away as his fancy pleases. The herring is dry and unobjectionable to the touch, so it is picked up between the fingers. Sometimes a little Graham biscuit is served at the same time, and the two together afford excellent opportunities for nibbling before the luncheon proper is served.

When Washing Lace Curtains. When the lace curtains are ready to be washed, baste a narrow strip of muslin along each outer edge and let it remain until the washing and drying process is completed and you will find your curtains are straight and do not sag as usual.

For Table Use. Rub smooth a quarter cupful mustard with a teaspoonful olive oil and a tenspoonful each onion juice, sugar and paprika. When well blended add vinegar to make consistency required, then bottle.
